SOUTH AFRICAN CAPITAL – CAPE TOWN

The immigrants who came to Cape Town in search of gold and diamonds soon found themselves in the middle of the Second Boer War, in which Great Britain was victorious. A gradual influx of British settlers from the 1820s onwards forced the isolated Dutch farmers to move further inland.

Cape Town first became the capital of the Union of South Africa in 1910, before achieving its current status as the Republic of South Africa's legislative capital in 1961.

“In 2018, my family and I went to South Africa. We visited beautiful places there. Cape Town is such a beautiful place filled with a diversity of people, languages, tastes and music with a spectacular view. We visited the Robben Island that is located off Cape Town. It became a maximum-security prison in 1961 for long-term convicts (ten years in perpetuity).

After that, we went to Port Elizabeth and visited Kragga Kamma Game Park. As we entered, we saw the Rhino and her baby. We came upon the Giraffe herd in the road and how exciting to see these long necked amazing creatures so close feeding off the trees – one HUGE one walked across the road in front of the car. At the little dam, the buffalos were lying resting with calves and the male was smelling the air. I just love the trip.”
