EU Green Week

1 May - 4 June 2021

What? The EU Green Week is Europe's biggest annual conference focusing on environmental policy. The 'EU Green Week 2021' will take place from 31 May to 4 June 2021, and includes an opening event on citizen science for Zero Pollution taking place in Lahti Finland, a virtual high level conference hosted by the European Commission, and many local partner events happening across Europe. It brings together participants from government, industry, non-governmental organizations, academia and the media to exchange ideas and best practices.

European Green Week 2021 will be dedicated to the 'zero pollution ambition'. This year's edition couples the European Green Deal with the recent adoption of the EU Action Plan 'Towards a Zero Pollution Ambition for Air, Water and Soil'. The numerous high-level panels will also explore related policy initiatives included in the EU Green Deal that are essential for EU's Zero Pollution ambition such as the climate initiatives, the EU Chemicals Strategy, as well as EU initiatives in the fields of energy, industry, mobility, agriculture, fisheries, health and biodiversity.

Why? Pollution is widespread and poses a direct threat to human health, but also to the health of our planet, as it destroys biodiversity and ecosystems. Addressing pollution is not only an environmental priority, it's a priority for the achievement of the SDGs. UNEP is working with governments, businesses and civil society to beat all forms of pollution. At EU Green Week, UNEP will be contributing expert views to the discussions, in particular on the international dimensions.
