Facebook

Facebook is the world's largest social network, with 750 million users worldwide as of July 2011. More than any other company, it is defining what some see as the "social" era of the Internet. And its policies, more than any others, seem to be driving the definition of privacy in this new age.

The company, founded in 2004 by a Harvard undergraduate, began life catering first to Harvard students and then to all high school and college students. It has since evolved into a broadly popular online destination used by both teenagers and adults of all ages. In country after country, Facebook has cemented itself as the leader and often displacing other social networks. It has also come to be seen as one of the new titans of the Internet, challenging even Google with a vision of a Web tied together through personal relationships and recommendations.

The company's rise has been marked by strings of controversies. Three other Harvard students maintain that they came up with the original idea and that Mr. Zuckerberg, whom they had hired to write code for the site, stole the idea to create Facebook.

"The Social Network," a movie released in 2010 about Facebook's tumultuous origins, offered up what A.O. Scott called "a creation story for the digital age and something of a morality tale, one driven by desire, marked by triumph, contaminated by betrayal and inspired by the new gospel: the geek shall inherit the earth."

Mr. Zuckerberg disputed the characterization of him in the film, though in a New Yorker magazine profile, he acknowledged having indulged in a bit of immature arrogance.

QUESTÃO 05

(CAMPINAS/2015) Leia o texto a seguir.

"Machiavellianism" is a used negative term to characterize unscrupulous politicians of the sort Machiavelli described in The Prince. The book itself gained enormous notoriety and wide readership because most readers assumed the author was teaching and endorsing evil and immoral behavior. Because of this, the term "Machiavellian" is often associated with deceit, deviousness, ambition, and brutality. However, that was Machiavelli's stylistic device to gain the reader's attention for his close analysis of the actual techniques used by rulers.

QUESTÃO 07

(IFG/2015) Leia os textos a seguir.

“The media seems to treat epidemics differently, depending on where they occur, and to whom. I think unfortunately, in the Western media, there are first-world diseases and third-world diseases, and the attention devoted to the latter depends on the threat they pose to us, not on a universal measure of human suffering. A death in Africa or Asia should be as tragic as a death in Europe or the USA, and it doesn’t seem to be. If an epidemic breaks out in the USA or Europe, suddenly the reporting is more engaged. I would like to hear from the people who are affected everywhere. I would like to feel that everyone’s voices are more equally heard, even if they speak a language that is not mine.”

- (A) a xícara de café, um dos símbolos americanos, aparece na tira para assombrar o gato durante a noite.
- (B) o gato pensa que a xícara de chá é apenas o pesadelo costumeiro da noite.
- (C) o gato tem uma conversa imaginária com uma xícara, para adivinhar o seu conteúdo.
- (D) café descafeinado com leite desnatado e adoçante artificial, isso sim é um pesadelo para o gato.
- (E) o gato não tem medo da xícara se ela contiver café.

QUESTÃO 09

(UNIFOR/2013) Leia o texto a seguir.

Twelve years after the first Morse Code signal had been successfully transmitted across the Atlantic, an American inventor named Lee de Forest appeared in a US court charged with fraud. The case against him was that he had been selling shares in his Radio Telephone Company.

Putting his case before the jury, the prosecutor explained, 'De Forest has said in many newspapers and over his signature that it would be possible to transmit the human voice across the Atlantic before many years. Based on these absurd and deliberately misleading statements, the misguided public has been persuaded to purchase stocks in his company'. Two years later, the first direct transatlantic speech relay by radio telephone was made. As for Lee de Forest, he patented more than 300 inventions and became known in America as the 'father of radio'.

In: I wish I'd never said that, Oxford, Past Times, 2001, p. 61.

Choose the correct option.

- (A) Even after the transmission of the Morse Code, the prosecutor did not believe in signal transmission.
- (B) De forest was prosecuted for announcing something in the media which proved impossible to happen in a two years' time.
- (C) By the time it was proven de Forest was right, 14 years had gone from that day in court.
- (D) Over a decade after the Morse Code was transmitted, de Forest was arrested.
- (E) The prosecutor thought the public was led to accept impossible hypotheses.
